

Saqlain Waris

Climate Change Journal #1:

I have already made good friends in class, and I am very comfortable with my group members, I feel like we are open and aren't shy to talk with one another and not only are we productive but we casually talk with one another. I've found the class to be quite interesting so far and opened my mind to how climate change is affecting the world. I hope to learn more about Climate Change and perhaps learn what my peers have talked about in their Climate Change Narrative. I found the Climate Change Narrative to be quite reminiscent and while writing it I learned a deeper understanding of how Climate Change affects me. The class has been quite enjoyable.

Climate Change Journal #2:

So far, my experiences in class have been rather good, I enjoyed the climate change narrative and it helped me write a story about an experience that I had. This class is helping me with my writing skills and when in the future I hope that the skills I am using will help me with other classes as well and provide some confidence in my writing as well as room for improvement. I also enjoy my classmates as well as my group that I work with. We work well together and help each other and also talk with one another, whether it's about the class or something off-topic. I hope that the research paper won't be too difficult and would love to start working on it once I am set up with the resources I need for it.

Climate Change Journal #3:

I found a source and helped my peers find a source. We checked each other up and we are doing well so far. I'm currently still looking for more sources and will hopefully have all of them by the end of the week.

Climate Change Journal #4:

So far, I am doing well on my Research paper on how earthquakes effect Indonesia's economy. I have done my introduction and 3 body paragraphs which amounted to about 2 ½ pages. I'm looking to work more on my research paper and get a lot done this thanksgiving break. I have another paper for another class due after the break and I hope ill be able to work as much as I can.

Climate Change Journal #5:

I have done quite a lot of work on my Research paper, and I am almost done with my Research paper and looking to edit it more. I also have a project for Prof Padilla and the self-reflection paper to do which means I am going to have work a lot these last weeks. This class has been quite an experience and I enjoyed talking with others in the class.

Climate Change Journal #6:

I have finished all my work for the class. The class was a lot of fun and I learned a lot and improved on my writing. I hope that this class will help me in the future when it comes to writing papers. I liked the people in the class, and everyone was easy to talk to and getting help with the things I needed was very easy and simple.